NEW YORK (January 31, 2013) George "Comanche Boy" Tahdooahnippah has mined his craft as a world-class middleweight away from the spotlight, fighting almost exclusively in his home state of Oklahoma while amassing an undefeated record of 31-0-1 (23KO's) over his nine-year career.

On FEBRUARY 15, Tahdooahnippah will head to the Mohegan Sun in Uncasville, Connecticut for a ten round showdown with former world title challenger and East Coast fan favorite Delvin Rodriguez, 26-6-3 (14KO's), broadcast LIVE on ESPN FRIDAY NIGHT FIGHTS.

"This is what I've been looking for and why I signed with Joe DeGuardia and Star Boxing. I've watched Delvin fight for a few years, it seems like all of his fights have been on TV" said Tahdooahnippah. "He's always seemed like a classy, stand-up guy, very strong and skilled fighter. His first fight with Wolak was a terrific fight, seems like he's never in a bad one."

Rodriguez battled Pawel Wolak in July 2011 on ESPN FRIDAY NIGHT FIGHTS, a memorable war which was voted "Fight of the Year" by a consensus of boxing writers.

"It's been a long road and I know that I'll be the underdog but I truly feel now is my time. This is the opportunity I've wanted for a long time and I plan on making the most of it," continued Tahdooahnippah.

A Native American, Tahdooahnippah is of Comanche and Choctaw descent residing in Lawton, Oklahoma and the proud father of four children, boys Nacona 8, George Jr. 6 and Talon Sage, 4, and a daughter Lulu, two years old.

[illegible] with Cochrose, Delvin is and should be ready for Sakio Bika,