

A Shot of Boxing on the Last Day of the Year

The Guardian reports that talks have already taken place between Nicolay Valuev's co-promoters - Don King and Wilfried Sauerland - and

Danny Williams

' promoter Frank Warren for Nicolay Valuev to face Danny Williams

. I'd suggest Danny Williams needs to worry about

Matt Skelton

(who Williams is reportedly

scheduled to fight in February

) before he entertains notions of facing the Beast From The East.

The Mirror in the UK looks forward to a big year in boxing for 2006 . The Mirror considers what the future might bring for

e Calzaghe

Amir Khan

and

Ricky Hatton

, among others.

The Parksville Qualicum News has an interesting column on the travails of former Canadian Super Middleweight title holder

Mark Woolnough

. Woolnough's career turned controversial - as widely reported in the Canadian press - at the beginning of this year when Woolnough and four other men were charged with manslaughter and assault after a fight outside a Parksville nightclub. The case returns to court next month. It's an interesting read, as Woolnough is still looking to the future with hope.

Our own Marc Lichtenfeld provides plenty of food for thought with his Top Ten Wish List for boxing in the New Year. There's plenty of good stuff here, but what really jumped out for me is Lichtenfeld's opinion that a win over

Zab Judah

could have

Floyd Mayweather

knocking on the door of #### all-time great

status. Seems to me this might be jumping the gun a little. Or is Marc right?
