Top Rank's Bob Arum said Oscar De La Hoya's mega fight with Floyd Mayweather was good for the sport and seeks to speak with Golden Boy Promotions about possible match ups in the very near future.

"It put the focus back on boxing," said Arum by telephone on Thursday afternoon about the fight that drew 2.1 million pay per views. "By and large it helped boxing."

Currently focused on the Saturday middleweight showdown between Top Rank's Kelly "The Ghost" Pavlik and Edison "The Black Panther" Miranda, he sees his protégé as possibly next Golden Boy.

"I've always felt this about him," said Arum of Pavlik, who is undefeated and faces his most critical test against the Colombian bomber. "My feeling is he's two fights away from being the biggest attraction in boxing."

Of course there are two men named Miranda and Taylor who stand in is way of breaking through the barrier separating stardom from super stardom. Pavlik has to beat a super star to be a super star but it's two steps away.

"It's exciting to be in this position," Pavlik said.

Though Pavlik, to his credit, refuses to address the fact he is an Anglo fighter. The Youngstown, Ohioan has proven to be quite skilled and determined to become not only the middleweight champion of the world, but a prizefighter willing to face whoever is placed in front of him.

"You could see even when he was an amateur he was something special," Arum said.

Arum also said that he'd like to speak with Golden Boy Promotions about a possible match up between Marco Antonio Barrera and Manny Pacquiao in the near future.

"We know Barrera has about three months left in his contract," said Arum, adding that Top Rank would be willing to negotiate a fight between the two Pound for Pound fighters. Others mentioned as possible foes for the Filipino super star are Edwin Valero, Joan Guzman and Humberto Soto should he defeat Manny's younger brother Bobby Pacquiao on June 9 in New York City.

Speaking of June 9, another fight with enormous implications takes place between Miguel Cotto and Zab Judah at Madison Square Garden. It's a match that could go any direction. In July is Antonio Margarito's match against Paul Williams. Both fights are toss-ups.

"Both are tough fights," Arum said. "Both could go either way."
