WBO World Heavyweight Champion, Lamon Brewster, is set to defend his title in March 2005, against Andrew Golota.

Brewster (31-2, 27 KOs) knocked out the highly regarded Wladimir Klitschko in September, of this year, to obtain his world heavyweight belt and successfully defended his first title fight against Kali Meehan.

Brewster has made a full recovery from the cheek injury he sustained in the bout with Meehan.

As one of the most gifted athletes in the heavyweight division, Brewster promises an exciting battle in the boxing ring. According to manager, Sam Simon, Brewster will start training in January, and has picked up the services of the well-respected Jesse Reid as trainer.
