HUNTINGTON, NEW YORK (February 24, 2013) Saturday night in front of a standing room only packed house of Long Island fight fans at The Paramount and a nationally televised audience on NBC Sports Network's FIGHT NIGHT, The Fighting Pride of Huntington, New York, Chris Algieri won the biggest fight of his pro career, capturing a ten round dominant decision over Jose "Mangu" Peralta of Jersey City, New Jersey in their junior welterweight bout.

"It was an electric evening and I'm very proud that once again Star Boxing was able to show the boxing world on this nationally televised broadcast the rich talent we have on Long Island" said Joe DeGuardia, President of Star Boxing. "This was our seventh straight sellout at The Paramount where the fan and media support has continued to be tremendous."

"Chris Algieri truly shined in the biggest win to date and we look forward to a very big 2013 for him. And the rest of our young stars on the Star Boxing team, Cletus Seldin, Issouf Kinda and Alan Gotay are to be commended for their terrific performances."

Using an excellent array of pinpoint jabs, blistering left hooks and powerful overhand right hands, Algieri controlled the action throughout the fight against the game but outgunned Peralta.

Scores at the end of the action filled ten rounder were 98-92, 97-93 and 96-94. With the win, Algieri stayed undefeated with a record of 16-0-0 (7KO's) while Peralta moved to 10-2-0 (6KO's).

Fighting for the sixth time at The Paramount, Cletus "The Hebrew Hammer" Seldin scored his eighth straight knockout victory, stunning the crowd at The Paramount by stopping New York City's Jonathan Cuba with a massive overhand right, which quickly stopped the action.

With the win Seldin improved to 11-0-0 (9KO's), while Cuba fell to 6-5-1 (4KO's).

In a scheduled eight round junior welterweight tilt, Issouf Kinda knocked out Phoenix, Arizona
