No surprise here

amayseng says:

Good.

Good for boxing.

Now bring the PPV price down to earth.

39.99$$$$

SouthPaul says:

Nothing too unique here.... Scalpers always buy out these mega events.

TSS should do a piece on boxing minimum wage. Do an article on how one of the most wealthiest fight cards this year will still be paying some of it's employees a measly poverty wage. Try to make sense of how some boxers participating on this card won't even be able to afford a room at the MGM Grand Hotel Casino. Swirl that around your mind wash rinse laundry style, boxing fans.

Radam G says:

C'mon, SP! Those rooms are for the big ballers, shot callers, high rollers, high-risk gambling players and five-thousand-a-night stayers. The prelim fighters -- with no hookup -- don't get expense money and free rooms. That is the bounce of the ball. From heaven, freebies and money doesn't fall. Holla!

amayseng says:

Those big money rooms are for guys like RG

come on SP you know better.

RG im still awaiting that family business job offer !

Radam G says:

Hehehehe! Funny! Funny, amayseng! "Watch what you wish, you may get it," said Buddha. Holla!

SouthPaul says:

Lmfao@ all the big balling, high rolling comments (including Deep's cigar reference) but I ain't even talking up suites. MGM is offering a room right now they all the petite king. 350 square feet ....most certainly a notch above the standard but by no means Swiss Banker status stay. If you stayed in this room from Friday they fight night Saturday...checking out Sunday morning all bruise and lumped up.... Your bill for the room alone is going to be in the gouging neighborhood of over 1,400. So if you're a fighter on the non televised card ...saying making 3 g's....half your earnings is now gone. Anyhow, y'all are smart boxing brethren .... You can figure it out....but just find it filthy disgusting myself.

It ain't just a simple bounce of a ball.... More like someone gabbing the ball and traveling his *** not only across the court but out of the arena...straight back to his Swiss banking cronies to make a deposit with some heavy duty boxing loot.

Radam G says:

SP, there are some generous peeps in Sin City. First, half of the money of those prelim fighters will be taken by their teams. With all that said, they will be able to bunk in bootlegged gyms and regular ones for about 75 bucks per night. And even low-budget ladies of the night will be giving 'em a hook up in a off-strip, roach-and-rat filled motels. A few of the low-budget fighting fighters will even get a hook up at that roach hotel where OJ Simpson was busted for stealing his own syet. OMG! Hehehehe!

Broke fighters always find a way to be a part of an important day. Everybodee and dey momma get a piece of the action. Holla!

SouthPaul says:

Lmfao@ the OJ comment. I'm in Vegas today. Just came up from the Luxor pool. 113f in this bitch.

Radam G says:

BTW, a BIG WELKOME to The TSS One-Thousand-Post Club, SouthPaul! You are a real playa! Hehehe! Holla!

I'll have to keep that in mind for next time, Deep, am already back home. Short 2 day stay which is actually plenty enuff in a playground like Vegas. Fun place to visit but also a great place to leave in the rearview.

Thanks, Radam. Kinda fitting since I rolled the TSS odometer while in the Mecca of Boxing. Cruised in around 2:30 am ..one of the first things I see glowing in the bright neon lights was a huggge billboard draping the MGM declaring it home of Floyd MAyweather. Good look!

Raiders says:

[QUOTE=deepwater;32711]You think Floyd could do a non ppv on CBS , and command Super Bowl advertising prices ? A half million for 30 sec commercial? If it is all possible gift the masses with a " free fight" and help. The sport of boxing. Just a dream I suppose it would never happen.[/QUOTE]

I was reading that those dramas that are on CBS cost 60 million dollars a season TV networks throw around pallets of money like nothing,Fox gave ufc like 580 million and they barely get more the boxing on NBC. I think Khan-Mayweather could be possible, if they could do 15 million at the gate and 5 million in other fees, I think it would be possible, a number cruncher could make it work once for sure.
