

Canelo Calls Ellerbe Catchweight Claim "A Complete Lie"

Written by Michael Woods

Friday, 06 September 2013 20:55

"That's a complete lie. They wanted me to drop weight."

And with those words, stated forcefully, not in a seething manner, but with more fire in his body language than we're accustomed to seeing from the 23-year-old Mexican who exhibits the composure of a supreme veteran, I hoped we had some gasoline tossed on the fire, one week away from the clash in Las Vegas between the "they" Canelo referred to, Floyd Mayweather, and the young gun seeking to trample Juan Manuel Marquez and zoom past legend Julio Cesar Chavez Jr. as the man in Mexican boxing.

Canelo Calls Ellerbe Catchweight Claim "A Complete Lie"

Written by Michael Woods

Friday, 06 September 2013 20:55

The promotion has coalesced into quite the moster, and is I think a good bet to do better than the No. 5 boxing PPV of all time, Mayweather vs. Cotto (1.5), and the No. 4 (Holyfield-Tyson I) and maybe sniff at the No. 2 (Lewis-Tyson and Holyfield-Tyson II).

And now, with the latest accelerant added to the mix, courtesy of the third episode of Showtime's All-Access, it seemed like a little spice had been added to the stew.

Canelo is basically smearing Mayweather, when he dismisses Floyd advisor Leonard Ellerbe's claim that the only reason a Canelo catchweight was activated was because Canelo brought it up.

I don't want to over-extend here, do some hit baiting by paying an exorbitant amount of attention to what is essentially a subplot appealing to a million or so boxingheads who eat, sleep, live and breath the sweet science. When Canelo says, in this All-Access preview, released Friday night, ahead of the Saturday 10 AM showing on Showtime of episode three, "It's just talk. Pure talk," the man's blood pressure isn't zooming at all.

{youtube}eeMuSILZOqQ{/youtube}

He's as chill, frankly, as all hell, and it is clear that Ellerbe's assertion, and labeling Canelo's management buffoons, doesn't get deep under his skin, if at all. "They know very well that they're the ones that wanted the fight at this weight," he continues, in a measured tone, his pulse raised maybe a point or two.

I admit, I'm a sucker for emotions on display, good old fashioned nose flaring and trash talking, and this buildup to this fight hasn't really had it. Mayweather hasn't been inclined to wear the bad guy hat, and Canelo, I think, simply doesn't have an ill tempered side, or a desire or ability to manufacture one for the cameras, as I think Robert Guerrero did (to his credit, I might add, I thought he helped sales with his yapping).

Let's not get too animated because of this flareup, act like too many of these media entities who manufacture drama and storylines in order to conjure false hype and hits and ratings and

Canelo Calls Ellerbe Catchweight Claim "A Complete Lie"

Written by Michael Woods

Friday, 06 September 2013 20:55

eyeballs...but let's pay attention to this subplot, because it could, conceivably linger, and fester, and ignite. I admit, I wouldn't mind seeing the red-headed Mexican's Irish rise up, and see him snap a bit.

Comment on this article

Radam G says:

Nothing new. In seedy, ole boxing, lies are many as gnats and flies buzzing a piece of $!
Team Money May wanted Canelo to fight at 147lbs. Holla!

amayseng says:

Yep.

No one puts themselves at a disadvantage unless they have no choice.

The turtle ellerbe is a liar.

kidcanvas says:

floyd built that 0 on lies and disadvantages for his opponents

jzzy says:

Easily solved by coming in at 154 not 152, what's Floyd gonna do, cancel the fight. Canelo should pay him back for what Floyd pulled on Marquez. Mayweather is in for a real fight here.

amayseng says:

[QUOTE=jzzy;36069]Easily solved by coming in at 154 not 152, what's Floyd gonna do, cancel the fight. Canelo should pay him back for what Floyd pulled on Marquez. Mayweather is in for a real fight here.[/QUOTE] i agree completly then floyd will have the even playing field he has asked for all these years...

plus, if floyd wins, then he gets FULL credit with no advantages.....

both men would win, canelo would give a better account of himself

Carmine Cas says:

Team Mayweather originally did want the fight 147, I agree Canelo should come in 154, see

Canelo Calls Ellerbe Catchweight Claim "A Complete Lie"

Written by Michael Woods
Friday, 06 September 2013 20:55

how Floyd likes it.

The Shadow says:

[QUOTE=Carmine Cas;36073]Team Mayweather originally did want the fight 147, I agree Canelo should come in 154, see how Floyd likes it.[/QUOTE]

He'll like it just fine. That means an extra $5 million in his pocket.

leon30001 says:

I wish it was Canelo-Ellerbe. That fight I'd pay to watch!

amayseng says:

[QUOTE=leon30001;36124]I wish it was Canelo-Ellerbe. That fight I'd pay to watch![/QUOTE]

ditto that i would even pay ellersbe to fight me...

stormcentre says:

More than likely this is just Ellerbe shitstirring and trying to get Canelo and his camp into a little fluster and frustration. I can't see Canelo having much more than a puncher's chance for this one.

Not in the least as he pulls that right hand away from the side of his face an awful lot when he jabs and also when executes a few basic moves.

Oh, and Canelo's sense of pace and economy of motion are not what they should be for a fight with Floyd.

Carmine Cas says:

[QUOTE=The Shadow;36085]He'll like it just fine. That means an extra $5 million in his pocket.[/QUOTE]

Then everyone's happy, and Mayweather won't catch flack from people about the catchweight

Carmine Cas says:

I wish Gabe Rosado punched Ellerbe in the face when he got in his space

amayseng says:

Canelo Calls Ellerbe Catchweight Claim "A Complete Lie"

Written by Michael Woods

Friday, 06 September 2013 20:55

[QUOTE=Carmine Cas;36178]I wish Gabe Rosado punched Ellerbe in the face when he got in his space[/QUOTE]

i missed it when was this?

Carmine Cas says:

[QUOTE=amayseng;36185]i missed it when was this?[/QUOTE]

During one of the promos before Rosado-Love.

[url]http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OYsXxg41M4E

amayseng says:

just watched it Ellerbe is a straight bitch talking * like that then standing there like he is a tough guy. props to Rosado for restraining himself because i would have knocked his turtle  out...

its unreal people like ellerbe exist

i hate that dude

Carmine Cas says:

Ditto, hopefully Karma serves him and Broner well