"Polished and mature" is the best way to put it, to describe how Manny Pacquiao downed Timothy Bradley in Las Vegas on April 12.

Manny's revenge was the consummate dish best served cold, as after almost two years, the Congressman showed one and all that he has a skill edge on Bradley, and yep, that was the case when they tangled in 2012, and once again in 2014.

Check out some highlights from Pacman breaking down Shane Mosley, and then eating canvas against Juan Manuel Marquez. Then, note how Bradley's tactics contributed to his demise. He flung right hands, time and again, which were errant bombs.

OK, enough text...get into this video analysis, and enjoy some slo-mo dissection, so you can better appreciate all that Manny brings to the table.

TSS Fight Forensic Analyst L-Wy got down with it. Now what can be more clearer than that about the super skills of Da Manny?

Da Manny is so uncanny. And will sink Money May's front-yard taught, bootlegged shoulder-rolling @$$ like the Titanic. The whole Fam May and it groupies will be in full panic.

They will wonder "O'HOW and O'WHY," as the jacked-up super myth of Money May's unbeatology [;$;¢] double die.

On Money May's arse, Da Manny will be a toll. He ain't scared of no Pops Joy May's bootlegged, front-yard taught shoulder roll. Holla!

Manny is so good and so fast that honestly you have to see it in slow motion to see the sweet work he does.

I watched it live, on my plasma, in HD, sober, and I didnt catch half of what he was doing in there..

Bsug said it right, Tim had to work 110 percent just to keep pace with Pac and just like last fight he injures himself one way or another in the process. by round 7 Tim had depleted all he had just to stay even in 6 rounds. Pac is just on another level.

Appreciate him while he is here
