Fight re-scheduled: Wladimir Klitschko vs. Dereck Chisora in Mannheim on April 30.

The title defense of IBF, IBO, WBO and "The Ring" World Heavyweight Champion Wladimir Klitschko against British and Commonwealth Champion Dereck Chisora has been re-scheduled for April 30 at SAP Arena Mannheim, Germany. Originally, the fight was supposed to happen last year on December 11, also in Mannheim, but had to be cancelled due to an injury of Wladimir Klitschko.

"I am very happy that we have found a new date for the fight so quickly. Chisora insulted me many times and that is why I still have unfinished business with him. He is a very good boxer but as a person he is a loser. Like I had done in December I will now teach him a lesson end of April," says Wladimir Klitschko.

The reason for the cancellation in December was an injury Klitschko suffered in training three days before the fight.

27-year-old Dereck "Del Boy" Chisora is the current British and Commonwealth Heavyweight Champion as well as #9 ranked in the independent world ranking. In 2007, he started his professional career and has won all his 14 fights since then, 9 by KO.

For Wladimir Klitschko it will be the 19th world championship title fight. The professional record of the 1996 Olympic Gold medalist is 55 wins (49 KOs) with only 3 losses.

In Germany, the fight will be shown live and exclusively on RTL.

There you have it, folks. You can still make the match happen with Fight Night Champion, which comes out on March 1st for the Xbox 360 and PS3. David Haye and Wlad Klitschko are both on the roster, along with Vitali, Tyson, Lennox, Pacquiao and others. No Mayweather, sadly, as he is as reluctant to climb into the virtual ring as he is in a real boxing ring.

Joe says:

This guy talks a lot of trash; he'll get a good whuppin'. Jab, Jab, Right Hand, Hold. Again. A long night for this guy. We'll see how tough he is, how long he can take it.

Radam G says:

Yippy! Boo hoo! This must be the greatest match of sorry-arse heavies in years. Nyet! I rather watch my cat Peeps clawing at the Leyte Island incests and geckos. Holla!

This isn't the article for this, but I thought I'd put this to rest once and for all. Here's a quote I bet everyone in here will appreciate. "I am willing to have blood tests all the way up to the fight and even before the 6th round if Mayweather so wishes."-Manny Pacquiao. Google Manny Pacquiao agrees to Olympic drug testing. Only escape for Floyd now are the prison walls. "A COWARD dies a thousand deaths." That's a nice quote. Here's another one. "Ill fight Manny Pacquiao if he knocks out Shane Mosley."-Floyd Mayweather. FRAUD DUCKweather.....GRADE A DISGRACE AND EXCUSE QUEEN. Now to address this article.... "I'm not fighting Wlad if he wants an interim fight in April before fighting me in July."-David "THE @B-Sug. Solis has lost all discipline in coming out of Cuba. He is just running his mouth. He could kayo every heavy alive, with K-bros/docs being the easily. But da sucka luv his freedom to eat every dang thing that he desires and cut back on training. The one thing about boxing is that an optical illusion can be played on the naive and know nothings, but not on the in the knows. Solis is a bleeping disgrace and has learned the Western-world con job of business propaganda while half-arse doing da do. This sucka wouldn't fight a single boxer for FREE. You'd have to give him some Cuban rum, a steak, some yams and okra. One thing that I will give ex-Soviet Union fighters, is that they didn't lose their discipline, determination and soul by immerging into the western culture of trying to fool every d*mn body, including themselves by just TALKING BIG. The ex-Soviets are indeed hard workers. They just lack talent. The K-bros/docs are winners because of HARD WORK, DISCIPLINE and DETERMINATION mixed with learned old-school dedication. Holla!

brownsugar says:

Great response Radam,...that's the popular opinion about Solis,.. that hamhocks,.. all you can eat buffets and Halloween candy has made the man soft. Perhaps the over indgreulgent capitolist lifestyle of living in a comparitively free society has dulled Solis's fighting edge. And it's really hard to argue your point. But I think that Solis's lifelong habit of being a winner... being accustomed to standing on the highest position of the podium thru out his amateur career at the highest level will motivate Solis to come into the fight at his best state of readiness. I can't say for sure that he'd win although it seems that he has the potential to do so...Looking forward to hear your outlook after the fight.

Radam G says:

@B-Sug. Because of learned good habits of boxing, Solis will come to fight, but will he ever be in shape again? The knowledge will always be there. Like the saying in Spanish: "El que es gallo, en cualquier gallinero canta, no? [He who is a rooster, sings in any chicken coop, no?] And as the commentary saying goes in boxing, "the Cubans are fightin' fools." In Cuba, they went to elite boxing schools and were virually locked up in those schools. Discipline and conditioning were forced upon them. They were glad to be released from boxing schools, put on the Cuban National teams and going around the world to kick arse. Now 95 percent of them who have defected to the West are glad to eat, party and have sex, sex and more sex. Excess and wrong type of eating, partying and sexing don't mix with pugilism -- amateur or professional, especially professional. Solis is 5-foot-11, though he is listed at 6'1 and a half. In Cuba, as a primed amateur, he fought at 195lbs to 200lbs while winning every world amateur title on the planet. Now the guy is just 30 years old, but have gained 85lbs since defecting to the West. He walks around at about 285lbs and fights at 260lbs. He has fat liver and once he is tagged on that liver, he is a true goner. I pick any one of the K-bros/docs to finish him off in four rounds or less. LESS is more likely. Holla!
