Critics, fans and fellow prizefighters had been saying Bernard "The Executioner" Hopkins was getting old when he emerged on top of the middleweight division by defeating Felix Trinidad in 2001.

Even back then people questioned how much longer the Philadelphia boxer would last.

Here we are witnessing yet another upstart trying to topple the legendary Hopkins (52-5-2, 32 KOs) as Chad Dawson (30-1, 17 KOs) takes a crack on Saturday at Staples Center in Los Angeles. It's an impressive fight card but no one on the card is more impressive than Hopkins. HBO pay-per-view will televise.

Line up another youngster.

"I want to embarrass another young so-called gun of the world, of the boxing world, and prove that Bernard Hopkins is not better, but just different," said Hopkins during a conference call. "And that's the page of a history book that I'm establishing-or I established since beating (Felix) "Tito" Trinidad in 2001. That's when my legacy started, and we're well into 2011 right now."

Here comes Dawson who was once dubbed one of the top fighters pound for pound by Floyd Mayweather several years ago. Since that time he lost a decision to Canada's Jean Pascal, a victim of Hopkins.

"I'm excited about the fight. As you all know, the fight (discussions) went for years, and then we finally got it," said Dawson, who along with Vitali Klitschko are the only fighters to defeat heavyweight Tomasz Adamek.

Hopkins looks to add another scalp to his list of good fighters felled by his wizardry. Antonio Tarver, Glen Johnson, Roy Jones Jr., Kelly Pavlik, Oscar De La Hoya, Winky Wright and Trinidad are among those who were out-smarted by the Philadelphia boxing wizard.

In his last fight Hopkins became the oldest prizefighter in boxing history to capture a world championship when he defeated Pascal in Canada.

How does he do it?

Defense is the key to Hopkins victories, combined with an acute knowledge of angles, when to hold, when to hit and when to stay inside. Clinics are provided to the boxing world each time he steps in the ring. He's one of the few who could have stepped in the ring with Ezzard Charles, Archie Moore, Sugar Ray Robinson or Charley Burley. Not many could.

Dawson with his long arms and quick jabs poses a problem as all of his opponents do, but can he solve the spells that will be cast his way during the fight?

"I think everybody should just enjoy me while I'm here, because nothing lasts forever and I think we all know that," Hopkins said.

opponent in the brawling style of DeMarco, who slugged it out with the late Edwin Valero toe-to-toe. The Venezuelan boxer-puncher may not get another opportunity like this again. DeMarco is young and strong.

Danny "Swift" Garcia (21-0, 14 KOs) basically gets a Hollywood debut when he clashes with former junior welterweight world champion Kendall Holt (27-4).

A few months ago Holt upended Julio "The Kidd" Diaz by knockout. He's clever and dangerous. Garcia was tested severely by Nate Campbell, another veteran who was fighting much heavier than his natural weight. Garcia could be in over his head against Holt.

Paul "The Magic Man" Malignaggi makes his L.A. debut and finds himself facing another Mexican slugger, Orlando Lora (28-1-1, 19 KOs), in a welterweight match. The Brooklyn boxer should be able to defeat the Mexican but injuries are always lurking.

Another Brooklyn boxer Luis Collazo (31-4) is on the card and he will face Mexico City's Freddy Hernandez (29-2, 20 KOs). Collazo is a former world champion and has the slickness to frustrate Hernandez. But it only takes one punch to win.

In the preliminaries Coachella's Randy Caballero (12-0, 7 KOs) is scheduled to fight an eight-round affair. Several other bouts are planned. Tickets start at $25.
