

Ugh. We'd settle for a bronze age, let alone a golden age, we found ourselves saying as we watched Jean Marc Mormeck engage in a pickup-the-paycheck exercise against Wladimir Klitschko (pictured above) in Dusseldorf, Germany on March 3, 2012. Wlad, with the esteemed and beloved Emanuel Steward in his corner, who had as always cautioned against overconfidence in the leadup to the faceoff, exited with a KO4 victory, and Mormeck with a diminished rep. ---Michael Woods (Follow Woods on Twitter here)

Comment on this article

Radam G says:

Hum! Holla!

Boxing Year in Review-March 2012

Written by Michael Woods

Tuesday, 27 November 2012 00:00
