Gennady Golovkin scared off another batch of potential foes when he threw a left hook from hell to the body of Matthew Macklin in round three of the main event from Foxwoods, in CT, and on HBO, on Saturday night. The end came, with Macklin rolled over onto his belly, face down, in agony, at 1:22 of the the third.

The severity of the shot, the promise of power, has fight fans positively salivating. Golovkin jumped into Must See territory on this night, and I think it might be safe to say that he is considerably tougher than he showed in his last scrap, against Gabriel Rosado, because on that night he was sick. People are taking to Twitter comparing Golovkin's power to Mike Tyson, seeing him taking out Floyd Mayweather, AND Andre Ward...on the same night! OK, maybe not the same a fight featuring this principal, even if the last time they watched boxing was when Tyson was campaigning. We may well have seen the birth of a boxing superstar on this night, in Connecticut.

After, to Max Kellerman, Golovkin said that this was a regular fight, not a huge test. He watched the body shot, and said he got in good position for the body shot. "That's my lucky punch," he said. Is Sergio Martinez next? "This is a present for my public...I am ready for this fight."

Macklin after said he was "the best kid I ever fought." He said Golovkin picked his punches well, and his power is "clubbing, solid," even his jab.

The IBO and WBA middleweight champion Golovkin (age 31; 26-0 with 23 KOs entering; had KOd 13 straight foes; from Kazakhstan) was 159 pounds, Macklin (29-4 entering; age 31; born in England, grew up in Ireland, lives in Spain) was 159 on Friday, and both were 170 on fight night.

The event was put together by K2 and Lou Dibella.

In the first, GGG looked to stalk, cut off the ring, land heavy. A right lead-left hook late sent MM flying back into the ropes. "Move to your right," said trainer Buddy McGirt after the round to Macklin.

In the second, we saw a cut over Mack's left eye. He ate heavy shots, a few of them, bad ass detonators.

In the third, a left hook to the body put Macklin down, on his face, to be counted out. He was trapped on the ropes, and went to the mat like he was hit by a taser.

Thomas Oosthuizen met Brandon Gonzalez in a super middleweight fight in HBO's second fight of the night. After ten rounds, we went to the cards, a surprise to folks who thought Tommy O would step up in this fight and really shine. The scores were 98-92 (Pete Hary) for Gonzo, 96-94 (Glenn Feldman) for Tommy O, and 95-95 (Clark Sammartino), a draw.

Tommy O, from South Africa, holds the IBO 168 crown but that wasn't on the line on this night. The 6-4 lefty looked to keep the Cali boxer at a safe distance, and not let him swarm his way in, but not as much as he should have. O towered over the 5-10 1/2 Gonzo, and snapped a long, hard jab to nice effect early. But Gonzo's volume, and desire was on display, and maybe swayed judges early on. The 6-4 O was busier in the sixth, jabbed, worked in a couple uppercuts. "He's way more tired than you," said Gonzo's trainer Virgil Hunter, trainer of Andre Ward, after the sixth. He's ready to be whopped," Hunter said after the seventh, "Don't let it get away, don't let it get away, don't let it get away."

In the eighth, Tommy O didn't ramp it up like maybe he needed to, like he might be down a few rounds. He was busier in the ninth. Tommy O might have buzzed Gonzo in the 12th but he collected himself. We went to the cards. HBO's Steve Weisfeld saw it 96-94, for Gonzalez.

Gonzo won 164-160 in punches landed.

Willie Nelson (20-1-1 entering) took on Luciano Cuello (32-2 entering) in HBO's TV opener.

In this junior middleweight scrap, the Argentine Cuello surprised to the upside those who noted he'd lost to JC Chavez Jr (in 2009, UD10) and was stopped by Canelo Alvarez (TKO6) in 2010. He buzzed Nelson, the taller man who didn't use his height to best effect, several times.

Nelson had a cut eye in the third, and used his jab and reach to good effect to midway. Later, he chose to fight in close too much, perhaps, and got nailed a few times for his trouble.

After ten rounds, the fight went to the cards. They scored it 97-93, 97-93, 96-94, for the Ohian,

Written by Michael Woods
Saturday, 29 June 2013 22:45 whose trainer Jack Leow provided some entertainment with his fiery and profane exhortations in between rounds. There was some booing in the stands at the decision.

Nelson went 231-649 to 198-553 for the loser, so as is fairly typical, the volume winner won.

Damn I hope Sergio's knee heals and learns how to clinch over night lol. I want to see him fight Quillen

Carmine Cas says:

One of the announcers made a good point, Macklin was there to be hit. His style played right into GGG's hard punching, GGG is an assassin

amayseng says:

His style played right into ggg as Macklin ran the entire fight?

He wasn't standing trading all fight he was in retreat from right off the bat.

Rewatch it.

Macklin was in the run the entire time.

Golovkin. He's a beast

amayseng says:

I'm just saying Macklin made an effort to box and not get hit.

stormcentre says:

Wow, what a statement 3G made with this dismantling.

Very impressive.

I thought there would at least be 6 or 7 rounds; if there was to be a KO win.

I'd like to see GGG fight Froch or Kessler now.

I can't imagine Martinez will like the risk/reward ratio associated with Golovkin right now - particularly since he flogged Mack The Knife with relative ease and disparity to Martinez; that must say something to Sergio whether he admits it or not.

Body shot KO's when the opponent is fresh speak volumes of their author's power and confidence.

Radam G says:

The fight went the way that I expected. You don't run from a killa without crowding him, clinching him and talking to him. It would be a good fight between the Big Apple Kid Chocolate and 3g for the first two rounds. Then 3g would kayo the "Q" in round three. That is what I eye. Holla!

amayseng says:

I'm a huge Sergio fan but I think he is getting older and worn down. All obvious from the injuries and close fights.

Ggg beats him up.

Kessler is solid but a bit worn and won't get much past Macklin did.

Froch is a tough bearded boxer but he lacks skill, fundamentals, speed, agility and defense and will be floored and best up in 10-12.

I hear ggg would come down to 154 for Floyd but how can that be healthy ?

Floyd wouldn't do it anyway.

I say kid chocolate next.

Macklin attempted early to crowd and hold.

Smart.

However.

Ggg adjusted and got his lean on to avoid it akin with footwork.

Then proceeded to grab Macklin and push his head down.

Smart.

Ggg has excellent footwork. I think that is being overlooked.

Radam G says:

Mack Knife didn't do boxing crowding and clinching. He did bytch holding and hugging and bugging. He was out of his league. Wow! I was shock that Buddy McGirt didn't stop it after of the second round. "We're stopping it, baby!"

Danggit! I made a four-figure bet that those famous words of Buddy would thunder. But 3g's liver punch wasn't having it. Holla!

DaveB says:

Wow Amayseng (I finally got it after all this time Amazing) Do you really think he can go up to 168 and beat up Froch? That really would be amazing.

and doesn't believe he can be knocked out.

It will be his undoing.

Ya amayseng as in amazing. Ha.

My name is in there somewhere

the Roast says:

Best win I've seen from the GGG. Make room for me on the bandwagon. Sergio had better avoid this man. The fight was competitive for about two minutes, then GGG started landing hard shots that made Macklin think twice. Mack's face was pretty busted up in the post fight for less than three rounds. GGG looks nothing like Bieber, more like Kostya Tsyu.

deepwater says:

Well ggg smashed Mack ,very impressive. He smashed him so quick, buddy didn't even have a chance to say I'm it stopping it baby. Ggg vs quillen at Barclays please . Ggg vs Sergio wouldn't even be close . Ggg vs Floyd at 154 !!!!!!!!!!!!! He is too nice to call out Floyd but Abel Sanchez can do it. If Floyd beats gingerbread man at 154 he has no excuse if ggg can make 154 . 160 -154 might be all ggg. Ward better stop commenting and get his butt in the gym.

brownsugar says:

They should rate GGG's fights "V" for violence... my grandson was a little disturbed after watching the delayed reaction of Macks silent scream a split second before he spilled onto the canvas ... a writhing mass of pain.GGG fights like a chess player looking 10 moves ahead...thwart one of his attacks and he's in position to execute 3 more strategies. ...Always forcing the action with virtually no downtime...eventually Mack had stop running and fight because he was getting his arose stomped anywayand when he did it just accelerated GGG's offence...poor kid never had a chance. Quillen said in a press release yesterday "I ain't scerred of no beast". He went on to say he would take on tonights winner. I have to wonder if he still feels the same today..... Quillen is one of the hardest punching middleweights this side of Curtis Stevens but otherwise he's not in GGG's league. I haven't been this excited about the middleweight division since Hagler ruled it with an iron fist. I guess GGG can finally be considered as a contender rather than a pretender for the P4P Throne.

deepwater says:

It was beautiful violence. What a nice young man outside the ring and a vicious animal inside it. What a refreshing fight. It's nice to see a boxer use his skills to hurt an opponent instead of coasting to a decision. Sweet Lou Dibella said a few months ago no one knows GGG, the day before the fight Sweet Lou said we're having a five round fight, after the fight he says Sergio can't fight this animal after a lay off. Good ole Sweet Lou. Throw big mouth Quillen who said it was a 50/50 fight in there with him. Al Haymon will keep all his phoney fighters away from GGG. I look forward to watching this nice young man again. What a breath of fresh air.

amayseng says:

Great post bslug very analytical and accurate.

And I agree with Deep all the way.

It's nice to have a silent killer.

Silent outside the ring when it comes to being a problem and a killer obviously in it.

I couldn't believe how relaxed GGG was through the entire fight.

After halfway through the first round Macklin had a panicked look and feel about him in there. He knew he was in trouble.

GGG doesn't load up on his shots or muscle up he throws everything good and he just has that power all the time.

Like I tell my kids it's a good swing everytime not a hard muscled up swing which can change your fundamentals and balance. (hitting at the plate).

This also goes for punching. It also conserves energy.

If GGG can make 154 completely healthy Floyd can't beat him.

Floyd is slick but he won't be able to score enough on the retreat all night because GGG is every active and efficient.

Radam G says:

Three-g has a near-perfect boxing ectomorph body . His thighs are too firm for him to try to drop weight down to 154lbs. It ain't gonna happen. And Abel Sanchez is not going to let it be. He know clearly that 3g is chemically perfect where he is. Drop him down in weight or fatten him, you destroy a nature near-perfect product. And by all means, don't put him on dat syet that gives you that eye-candy Hulk look.

Three-g can at least stop the pundits and fanfaronades and groupies and nuthuggers from believing in nonsense of great boxers having to look like Hulk-@$ body builders or be as tall as Bluderbore. Holla!

TBIZZY says:

what a performance by ggg!! i would like to see him spend the next year or so sweeping through the middleweight division then fighting maybe canelo or ward. i don't think canelo would stand a chance and the ward fight if given the time and both fighters continue winning would set all types of records on ppv.

teaser says:

was a pleasure to watch ggg...before the fight i told my buddy that I wouldn't want to have macklin's ribs in the morning ..I knew he was in big trouble when I saw how focused and serious ggg was ...didn't take long to see this was gonna be a short night ..a cold ,clinical and methodic destruction of a proven middleweight...in the first two rounds mack had the look of shock and awe...and in the third decided to go out on his shield and ggg was glad to oblige probably saving Macklin a much more serious beating

TBIZZY says:

i fully agree with you on all points except on mayweather. listen this kid is obviously the best puncher in boxing, and his ring command from the little i have seen of him is very good but Floyd could stick and move the whole 12 rounds as we know mayweather has the best stamina in the game, but having said that its a fight that wont happen i dont like ggg at 154 i think it would take too much energy to make weight. i think a good alternative is canelo vs ggg depending on how canelo fairs against money. either way ggg is a force and i can't wait to see his total fight package evolve as he gets more experience in big time fights. because mayweather is so great because of the adjustments he makes in mid-fight. very smart and instinctive boxer.

Carmine Cas says:

I would love to see the Quillen fight, make it happen! If GGG can make 154 then let him fight Floyd if his body isn't compromised. Macklin wasn't crowding GGG he was just holding on for dear life, I think you need to muffle his shots when you're on the inside with him and mug him in the process; a la mosley-margacheato and ward-froch. Speaking of Froch, it would only be a matter of time before GGG breaks him down. Yes Froch hits hard and has a sturdy chin but GGG would get on the inside and break him in the latter rounds. If Sergio fights GGG I strongly advise him to hire Naseem Richardson or Floyd Sr

Carmine Cas says:

GGG is very fluid between defense and offense, he's always in position to punch. Like B-sugar said he's 10 steps ahead of his opponents. To have success you have disrupt his rhythm and muffle those shots, for starters lol kidcanvas says:

i gave macklin 3 rds longer to last than it took obviously. he looked like he already * himself before he left the dressing room. u dont box a guy like that unless you have a granite chin wtf

To me Floyd versus GGG isnt practical.

Floyd could have fought his entire career as a junior welterweightHe still rehydrates to only 146-150 on fight night. By contrast Brandon Rios blew up to 155lbs for a lightweight fight. And Juan Guzman blew up to 148 BEFORE the weigh in of a junior-welterweight fight. When you compare Floyd to all time greats like Duran Hearn and Leonard...they were all naturally bigger which is evident by their ability to ascend all the way up to light heavy. Floyd does not belong in the ring with someone who will eventually be fighting Andre Ward someday. Canelo is already a rough assignment.. Floyd will have to hit Canelo hard enough to break both of his fragile fists before he can even wobble the Hulk-like Mexican. The fights I want to see is GGG vs Ward or Adonis Stevenson... or Quillen in the short-term....could you imagine that? After a couple of feeling out rounds Triple G would be all over the Q-man like the Zombies in "World War Z".

Unless, of course, if 3g suddenly becomes SuperBad Chad thinking, and starve down to 152lbs, then it is on.

Since 3g is an HBO fighter, I expect for it to take 3g to the Middle East or his home country to clean out the money in that market. Prizefighting is alive and kicking. Pridefighting is with SHOWTIME, GBP and The Shadow and is lollypop licking. Holla!

Floyd is the smaller man in the ring now usually, but if GGG can make the 154 lb limit they should fight. Floyd gave up a lot of weight fight night to Cotto, De La Hoya, and Ortiz. Radam G says:

Pridefighting is for puppets, posers, phonies and pretenders. Prizefighting is for BIG moneymakers. Look at all of the prizefighters and learned how much money they made in regards to the former.

For instance, the great light-heavyweight Bob Foster fought for pride. The light-heavyweights Bob Fitzsimmon, Michael Spinks and Roy Jones, Jr made 30 times more money than he, because they were prizefighters. And now as an old man, Foster lies and says that he had six-and-seven figure fights, when his largest purse was against GOAT Ali and Mike Quarry for 75Thou. The former welterweight champ Curtis Cok made $400 for his first pro fight in the 1950s, because he fought for prize. Pride (clubfighter and circusfighter) made $25 to $50 because of the pride to entertain and represent first.

Hopefully, I've made my point. There are a lot of fighting for peanut because of pride, not prize. And the pride is because of them, not the promoters. There are tons of pridefighters '-- Hulkquez and Buffet Bradley, to name two -- turn downs monster purses because of pride and cowardice over prize and courage. Holla!

I think Quillen deserves respect for what he's accomplished with only a handful of amateur fights and having to wait it out on the sidelines to heal some nagging injuries. By the sheer force of his determination and dedication, Quillen has willed himself to a championship..and personally I felt he was being ducked by Sturms, Martinez and Chavez. He has also said recently that he was open to a fight with GGG on Fridays (but he's been absent with his comments since GGG disarmed The Knife).

GGG vs Quillen is an interesting fight because both boxers have incredible power. But ultimately,... Quillen can only lose and learn from GGG. Quillen should target Geale after he beats Barker....or maybe see what he could do against Macklin before even considering being on the receiving end of a beatdown from GGG.

Quillen also has opportunities at 168.

Its a testament to Floyds ability that its automatically assumed he would compete against GGG, but he'll be lucky to get past Canelo.

And we don't tell wacko lies, kill off the native people, put 'em on reservations, destroy the wildlife of the vast amount of the environment. Then tell the-none travelling average Joes and Judies ridiculous lies about the masse of lands. Our people travel to see for themselves.

We have problems that we solve -- not sweep under the carpet. And then use magic to hide the real. Da Manny isn't leading the Rising of Asia, he is a part of it. He learned that fair play in Sin City doesn't mean syet. Holla![/QUOTE]

Hey, I totally agree with you in regards to our media, but let's not forget tiananmen square and how it was no where to be seen on the Chinese Internet, mao zedong killing tens of millions, Rape of Nanking, the treatment of women in China etc. Lol when you think about it asians are more upfront of their brutality. The US at least hides it in the media lol. Each society is guilty of human atrocity, US is one of the worsts. My point is asians are 10x worse than western societies when it comes wildlife and environment. US citizens haven't faced the necessity to wear masks or respirators whatever they are in our major cities from air pollution, although our navy is scumbag enough to do sonar testing on marine life; but we do not cut their dorsal fins and release them back into the sea to their inevitable death (holla at Wladimir he had front row seats), or the thousands of shark fins secretly drying out on the top of Chinese buildings, hunt endangered species, and of course the obvious the consumption of cats and dogs.

As for the rising in Asia I hope it succeeds for the good of boxing, golden girls should follow suit

Part of me thinks Floyd will have a walk in the park with Canelo, but if Canelo is smart he'll get his stamina up because he is going to need it. He showed glimpses of success against a slick boxer in his last fight. But Floyd is fighting Canelo because he sees weakness that he can exploit and win. And obviously the massive payday lol

Floyd needs Canelo because the ghost Ppv bombed and show time lost big time.

Floyd had no choice if he wanted to make big money to fight Canelo no one else brings in that type of money which is why

Floyd refused without the catch weight.

If Canelo and his team are smart they would know 152 is dangerous and won't fair well with the already tough 154 cut and have Alvarez come in at 154 anyway.

Pay the fine and let Floyd deal with it.

If Floyd backs out the day before the fight then he one so when he shoots his right hand and bends at the waist while turning his shoulder into the punch....71 inches suddenly turns to 78...Trout knows... I suspect this will be a very closely contested bout.

amayseng says:

Brown sugar the problem is Floyd's foot agility is still outstanding and will keep him exiting right left back and all over out of the pocket after his single and double pot shots.

Canelo will be overly stressed and pressing and gased out by Round 7.

This is another area ggg prospers in. Relaxed and patient.

Canelo does not have the reach of Big Money Oscar De la Hoya. Big Money O is a legit 5-foot-10. $tubby Canelo is about 5' 7 and some change. Help me TSS scribes? C'mon, MAN! You guys are here to inform. This cyberspace crowd is not going to believe shyt that I post because they don't know da game of promoting and hyping everything, especially size. It powerful promotion fo the game's playas look BIGGER than life.

The busters and posers, who have never been around true pro athletes, don't know that we are mainly the sizes of the general population. OMFG! That is where we come from. Holla!

Radam G says:

BTW! Canelo will not set any pace against Money May. Money May will control everything. And he will beat the brakes offthe hyped-up size and boxing ability of Canelo. It is more suckas being fooled again into thinking a sidewalk-speed fighter can stay on the dangerous streath speedway of Money May. Holla!

Wow! B-Sug, I don't know where you are getting your info, but Money May has the longer REACH from middlefinger across the shoulders to the other middlefinger -- 183 cm/72 inches. Canelo is usually listed at 181cm/71 inches. But sometimes he has been noted his likely truth reach of 68 inches.

Money May is larger/bigger in every department except weight. And Canelo is pudgy. He is the fat-$$$ bigger one in near-obese weight for boksing. Dude should be at 140lbs if he was boxing eating. Holla,

brownsugar says:

Right RG Canelo is 71"and Floyd is 72". But Canelo is wider and thicker....and there's nothing fat or Pudgy about him. The inch difference won't make a lick of difference ...the red headed hype is better than he's given credit for.. An upset win is not out of the question.

Amayseng... foot speed is important but Floyd has a habit of ducking at the height where Canelo likes to throw his hooks and uppercut. Floyd also leaves his sides open to attack occasionally....not a good thing to do in front of a body snatcher like Canelo. This will not be a walk in the park especially for May weather. Glad the fight was made... but not so optimistic as the rest of the TSS.

Radam G says:

You apparently haven't seen Canelo in person. Or if you have seen him in person, maybe you are one of those persons that have inattention blindness or sympathy to pudginess because some people see it as huskiness. So I will squash it with you by saying that pudginess is in the eye of the beholder. And it will be Canelo's downfall. Canelo is thicker not wider than Money May from head to toe. Let's just wait and see. Boxing measurements change at fight time when it become apparent to any uneducated eye. I guess once that sellers of the fight get that money, They will spill the truth.

At fight time, Money May will clearly be called the wider-shouldered fighter with the reach advantage and slide height advantage. I will bet one of my U,S. Homes on that. Holla!

Radam G says:

Hehehe! The only upset will be a gift victory to Canelo or Money May gets injured and cannot continue. But chances of that are slim. Under like the superhype's fat @$$$. He will be no match for Money May. Wow! Fans, fanfaronades and haters keep buying that Money May is finally fighting someone who will challenge him. YUP! Canelo is getting KTFO. And I'm betting moderate. Holla!

at 154, this is the fight of his life be your best. All of you had great points, Floyd does leave himself open to Canelo's hooks and uppercuts, Floyd does need Canelo for the big payday, and Canelo does need to get lean and mean. For his measurements I've seen from multiple sources that his reach is 71" at 5'9. Canelo needs to quick on his feet and feint his way in, disguise his attacks, and come in at angles

gibola says:

GGG put in a great performance and deserves huge credit. I thought Macklin would really test him but fair play to Golovkin he walked him down and Macklin couldn't deal with it. According to his management GGG is a natural 154lber who couldn't get opportunities and went to 160lb for a shot at a vacant title. Rather than taking on Froch or Ward (too big and strong, he will get manhandled and KO'd), GGG should try to get down to 154 and go after PBF, Cotto, Canelo, etc. Whatever happens I wouldn't touch 168. Quillan, Chavez, Martinez and Murray are all good opponents at 160 but 154 is where the real opportunities are. 168 is suicide - he's no easy mark but he's too small for Froch or Ward. Eddie Hearn will snap HBO's hands off if he's offered the fight for Froch in England but I'd be amazed if GGG's people took it. Froch is not Matthew Macklin.

amayseng says:

Gibola a shot and ruined Taylor out boxed and even put a bigger Froch on his  Before getting knocked out.

Ya froch is more seasoned but he is 5 years older.

Slower. Slower. And slower. Dude has no speed.

Ggg destroys froch.

I'm tellin ya.

The sheer physics don't add up in frochs favor.

And NO way Floyd fights ggg at 154

Carmine Cas says:

I would love to see GGG dismantle Froch, Adonis Stevenson would be a great fight as well. Yeah and Floyd doesn't go near GGG at 154

Cyberhaters and beefers can keep on spitting the jive that they want to about bytch-arse, unreliable sources stretching measurements and reach about the red-headed hype. However, the highly reliable, none-bullsyeting TSS sources know what is up and will spit it in this Universe, and it will go right over the heads of haters.

Haters and posers don't want the truth. They just want everybodee and dey momma to agree with the bullsyetology as if you are one of the weak rats marching off a cliff to the sounds of a pied piler's flute. Put dat jive on mute. Holla!

gibola says:

You all may be right, perhaps GGG would murder Froch. Alternatively Froch might take his punches and scare the life out of him when he made it physical and began punching back. GGG would land punches - certainly - but if he didn't knock Froch out early - and that is a huge if - Froch would wear him down as he did Taylor, Kessler and even Ward to some degree (watch R12 of their fight). GGG might be at his all-time high now, he's the next superstar, but I urge caution. Fighters rarely turn out to be as good as they appear at these moments, there is inevitably a fall-off as the quality of opposition improves and the expectations grow. Golovkin is good but I maintain Ward and Froch KO him. It's possible you TSS contributors (who I love reading by the way) may have more faith in him than his management. Let's see if his people sign a contract with either Ward or Froch if they get the chance. If they don't - you have your answer about what they think would happen up at 168.

teaser says:

yup...I am on the Triple G bandwagon now...Froch's lack of balance and speed would be his undoing....even with that good jab....the body attack would eventually stop him...his only chance would be his punch ...GGG will bust up his hands trying to knock him out any other way

Carmine Cas says:

[QUOTE=Radam G;32956]Oh, my boxing gods! YUP! I musta' fo'got! I'm reminded of fighting in Perth, Australia, when this American Navy ship named the USS Cleveland was in port. I paid for ringside seats for the whole crew to come to the fights. Afterward, I invited them to my after party at a five-star hotel banquet super room. A couple of the sailors -- from New York -- was liquored up and bugging from snipping coke -- not the soda kind.

Anyway! They starting verbally knocking the down-under natives about all type of stereotypical nonsense and myth from eating koala to having sex with bamboons. The sailors was asked to leave. They came back about twenty minute later with two drunk African-American sailors and told them to drop their pants. The drunken knuckleheads mooned the whole crowd, And shamefully, they had purchased fuzzy tails, stuck them in their anals and holla that "Negroes in the United States grow tails after midnight." It was Five passed midnight.

Several U.S. sailors rushed those dudes, beat 'em down and excorted 'em back to the ship. The ship's captain apologized to everyone.

Another time, I fought in Olongapo City, Philippines and invited some sailors and marines from a ship named the USS Tawara. Pinays were selling the famous Pinoy bar-b-cue chicken and beef on a stick. (Those who have been to the P-Islands know what I'm spittin' about.) Anyway, about Five drugged-up Yank sailors started bumrushing the Pinays and throwing their food products on the ground, and hollering that the d@mn F hos were selling them "Monkey meat."

The Filipino crowd, along with other American soldiers, sailors and Marines beat da double fudged syet outta the agitators/attackers and turned them over to P cops, who I know beat them so more.

Carmine Cas, you apparently have a problem of racism and ethnic stereotypes and mythical beliefs. Wow! You once told me to "quit posing in broken Ebonics" because apparently you don't know syet about boxing talk and slang that spreaded into pop culture and music, including, especially hip hop. You called me a racist for using the term "tar baby" because you don't have the proper education, and thought that I had lauched an attack on Tim Bradley's skin hue. And his skin hue is bronze colored, not black colored that street tar is. And what you wrongly thought that I was talking about. You remind me of the humbug behind the curtain.

Trying sticking with boxing and quit the dumb racist war propaganda of what people eat, because that is all that you can find about your fake boxing knowledge to attack with. "Consumptions of dogs and cats" and monkeys, bears, humpbackwhales, horses and humans for food is your weak escape from being the humbug behind the curtain in this strong boxing Universe. Knocking me or using a 100-year-old war propaganda about foods "eaten by the natives and gk enemies won't help you to jump over a hill of rat syet in your closet.

Get from behind the curtain and go on a hot balloon ride to reality and actuality.
