I hate it when I miss these big gala-like events. Anyone, can you please tell me who won for "Best Supporting Weasel To A Commission That Makes Things Up As They Go, Not To Mention Collaborated With Others To Attempt To Destroy A Virtually Indestructible Sport In A Record-Setting Time, Considering They've Only Been At It For A Relatively Brief Period Of Time Given The Several Thousand Year History Of The Sport" category?

Also, were there any real good sound bites from the Pope's acceptance speech?

Lastly, I don't care about your religious beliefs or non-beliefs, this Pope is a tremendous man.

Reminds me of when Roy Jones relinquished the light heavyweight crown and the WBC scheduled a fight for the vacant title between Rocchi and Nunn. Jones said he changed its mind and the WBC reinstated Jones title. Rocchi sued and the impending lawsuit threatened to bury the WBC forever. But somehow the conniving WBC begged themselves off the hook and have been unstoppable ever since. How ironic is that.

Radam G says:

JSTYK, B-Sug. Roc won a 34-million-dollar lawsuit against the WBC. It declared bankruptcy, and then got Roc on its back by making him WBC champ of something that I don't recall and letting Don King pay Roc $3mil to settle the lawsuit. Holla!

brownsugar says:

Thanks for the clarification RG... I knew it was some how resolved at far less value than the original amount.

Radam G says:

No, problema, B-Sug. Some people exaggerate that Roc won a lawsuit of $350mil. But that's boksing -- to exaggerate pay and height. Holla!

Bernie Campbell says:

Anybody for instance Joe Rockhead can give the Pope an award and look like the best thing since sliced bread! I don't mo anything about this guy! He definitely has a good PR department! Tpdays reading in Sunday Mass was about Onan! Very appropriate Jose'!
