Brewer on Adama Loss

Grady "Bad Boy" Brewer (30-15) is dissatisfied with the results of his fight with Osumanu Adama (21-3) Saturday night in Lowell, Mass. The two faced off on CFC Fight Night at the Tsongas Center at UMass Lowell, in Lowell, MA. "Adama didn't do enough to win this fight," he said. "I hurt him twice, once in the fifth round that could have been scored a 10-8 round, and another time later in the fight, I landed more punches and was more consistent, and he was wild with his punches when he got confused and couldn't figure out how to fight me." Prior to the fight, Adama failed to make weight and lost his chance for the titles that were at stake, the WBC IC middleweight title and the IBC IC middleweight title. "That's unfinished business," Brewer said. "Those belts are in limbo. I'd rematch Adama for the belts, for sure, or whoever else is in line for those titles."
