

"Ricky looked like a shell of his former self, fighting from the heart but looking like a mere breeze could knock him over. From what little I saw, Ricky threw himself into the maelstrom trying to be competitive even though it was evident his youth had left the building 3.5 years ago. Don't apologize, Ricky. None needed. Just go into the next phase, which is to promote the next Hatton. The appreciation of the Manchester crowd showed was almost tear jerking; if that isn't enough for you, nothing will ever do. Get out Ricky.....while you still have your wits about you and transision to the next level. Thanks for all the memories." --Brown Sugar echoes Roast's call to exit and stay away